

U
5-24-99

Dear Mr. Lake,

4587 '99 JUN 22 AIO:48

I am writing to strenuously oppose United States government participation in the United Nations Codex Alimentarius. This includes the attempt to regulate food labeling and non-pharmaceutical health products (herbs, vitamins, etc.).

As an American citizen and consumer, I demand the right to know what is in the food I eat. I also demand the right to full access to all types of health care, including vitamins and herbs.

As I understand it, these rights will be eliminated under U.S. compliance with Codex Alimentarius, a decision made by faceless bureaucrats behind closed doors.

I am especially concerned with having to eat genetically-altered foods against my will or knowledge. No one has yet been able to prove that these foods are not harmful. As a matter of fact, research is now showing that these foods may indeed be harmful. In either case, I demand the right to know whether or not my food has been altered in this way.

Again, please do not sell the American people short by complying with Codex Alimentaris. I view Codex as the worst kind of tyranny. The complicity of the American government in this affair is scandalous and inexcusable.

I am also writing about this matter to my congressmen.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Mark Dolce

92N-0139

C5604

Doyle

34 Apple Lane
Long Valley, NJ
07853

HFS-4 EN

L. Robert Lake

Director, Office of Policy, Planning & Strategic Init,
Center for Food Safety
Food and Drug Administration
200 C. St SW

Washington - DC 20204

20204/0002

